

Race

Down the street,
the morning glories wake.

The crinkled, blushing flowers uncurl and stretch
as they open to the sun.

Their weedy vines
run a race up fence wires, trying to reach the top.

A ladybug who lands nearby is their referee.